

FULL-STACK DEVELOPER

Do you enjoy learning and staying updated with the latest news in languages, platforms and development environments? Are you passionate about programming?
This job is for you!

LXA is a dynamic consulting company based in the heart of Nice Sophia Antipolis, with consultants from 15 different countries, who are working for the major economic actors in the area.

With participative local management, we are committed to keeping a close relationship with our consultants all along our common path.

Our areas of activity concern all the new technologies of IT and project management among others.

As our company is in full expansion in 2016, we decided to reinforce our team with new consultants. Are you ready to become one?

About the job:

You have to design and develop various web based components for systems.

You will work with the team to define what needs to be done and build it. You will be involved in all steps of development, from product identification thru architecture and execution.

You have to understand the current system and come up with creative ideas for refactoring or proactively improving the code base. You are going to be involved in full stack deployment opportunities and lean thinking, including impacting the development of coding conventions, documentation standards, testing procedures and quality assurance. You will be in total immersion with customer issues to support an ideal user experience.

Skills and requirements:

- Master Degree in Computer Science or related technical field.
- Fluent English
- Experience developing in Java and J2EE (full stack)
 - Spring framework or similar application development frameworks (Hibernate)
 - Writing queries with relational databases, such as Oracle, data modeling, MySQL (or similar)
 - Developing front-end technologies such as HTML, CSS, JavaScript, JSON, JQuery, JPA or JSP
 - Testing frameworks JUnit/TestNG
 - Agile methodologies
- Communication skills
- Analytical and Conceptual Thinking
- Information gathering
